Commuters Deserve More Options, Ayers Says

BY SCOTT JACKSON

Rep. Bruce Ayers wants the MBTA to run shuttle buses between Squantum Point Park and the North Quincy train station with half the parking spaces at the latter closed to make way for a mixed-use development.

Doing so would give more commuters the chance to ride a ferry into Boston, Ayers said, in addition to providing more parking spaces.

The T has used Yankee buses for past 20 months to provide service between Quincy Center, Wollaston and North Quincy with Wollaston station closed for renovations. Ayers said he would ask Steve Poflak, the T's general manager, to use those buses to provide shuttle service between Squantum Point Park and North Quincy once Wollaston reopens this month.

"I'm going to be asking the general manager, now that they won't need to run the Yankee buses from Wollaston to Quincy Square back to North Quincy, to utilize them and just re-route them from the North Quincy MBTA to Squantum Point Park," Ayers said, noting more than 800 spaces are available at Squantum Point Park.

Service on the Red Line has been delayed this summer after a derailed train struck a signal box at the JFK/UMass station in Boston. T officials have said the delays could last into October with repairs still ongoing.

ing.

"The MBTA, in my opinion, needs to work closer with the Quincy commuters to utilize the unique opportunity we have at Squantum Point Park by giving them another option of water transportation to and from Boston," Ayers said.

"They just had a rate hike. The service is too unreliable. The commuters deserve to have an opportunity to have another means of transportation."

Ayers said some commuters have been forced to drive into Boston with the construction ongoing at North Quincy, or they try to arrive at the station earlier than they normally would.

The shuttle to and from Squantum Point Park would help alleviate the situation.

"That would take an awful lot of pressure off the people who are now forced to drive into Boston or to leave earlier. We heard all the horror stories from commuters. A single mom now has to get a babysitter to get the kids to school - that's one of the type of things we're hearing. There is a whole array of them," Ayers said.

"This would take the pressure off the lack of parking, and they could utilize the water transportation, should they want to."

Quincy has partnered with Winthrop to provide ferry service between Squantum Point Park and downtown Boston since the summer of 2016. The ferry had been taken out of service in June because of engine trouble but set sail again this week. City officials have said the partnership with Winthrop could be the first step in securing a permanent ferry service out of Squantum Point Park, which would be similar to the service that formerly ran out of the Fore River Shipyard.

Ayers said the recent extension of Commander Shea Boulevard to Squantum Point Park, which was financed by the state, is part Cremation vs. Burial: Is Cremation Really Less Expensive?

There is a prevailing misconception that cremation is automatically less expensive than burial. This is because we often compare the cost of cremation with the cost of a funeral, and they are not the same thing!

Cremation and burial are choices for final disposition, and the main difference in cost has to do with cemetery fees, choice of caskets and/or urns, and whether or not embalming is necessary. And there are so many options that can help control these costs, which means that it is especially important to know in advance what those options are and how they can influence your choices.

Understand Your Needs:

Savings can be accomplished for either choice by understanding your options and considering what is important to you:

What traditions does your family hold to be most comforting?

Is a final resting place important as a place to visit and honor your loved one?

What are the wishes of the person?

What are the spiritual or religious needs and customs of your family?

What options will satisfy the need to celebrate and honor your loved one?

Set a Budget:

Your budget will be influenced by many factors and will be a guideline for some of the choices you make. Think about what you can realistically afford, who else will contribute, and what other sources like insurance or pre-paid funeral options may be available.

Know Your Options—Plan Ahead:

Planning a funeral is one of the most important things most of us ever do. The best way to control costs is by planning ahead. The experts at Keohane are trained to help you create a plan that satisfies your budget regardless of your choice of final disposition. There is never a fee to sit with a funeral director and explore different options and costs.

The choice between cremation and burial is a deeply personal one, and the decision ultimately comes down to what is right for you and your family. There are pros and cons to both which means that there is no "easy" or "right" answer. There is only the answer that makes the most sense for you, based on your family situation, personal beliefs, religion, budget and the choices that you make.

Losing a loved one is always a life altering event, and dealing with the logistics of planning a funeral and managing the related costs can be overwhelming. Fortunately, there are choices you can make that can help be prepared and make sound financial decisions; and most importantly, honor the life that is lived as well as the needs of the family.

The best way to control funeral costs is by planning. The cremation experts at Keohane are committed to helping find out what is important to you and helping you explore your options so you can make the decisions that will not only be affordable, but that help you and your family honor your loved one, and the needs of their survivors. 1686 Quincy Homestead Open For Tours Saturday

The 1686 Quincy Homestead, 34 Butler Rd., Quincy, will be open for tours on Saturday, Aug. 17 from 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. (last tour begins at 2 p.m.)

There will be a special display for visitors to view as part of the tours that day as the historic site acknowledges the wedding anniversary of Dorothy Quincy and John Hancock.

Have you heard the story that led to the marriage of one of Massachusetts' first political celebrity couples? What was it about the lovely Dorothy Quincy that attracted the attention of Boston's most eligible bachelor who had a heart full of patriotism in 1775?

Dorothy was the youngest child of Edmund Quincy IV and Elizabeth (Wendell) Quincy. Born in Boston on May 10, 1747, Dorothy spent many childhood years at the Quincy Homestead. She was likely the darling of her large prominent family as her four sisters were considerably older. Perhaps that's how she came by the affectionate nickname, Dolly.

Raised under the watchful eye of her mother, who was also born into a socially prominent family, we can imagine that Dorothy was presented into then Boston society at an appropriate age. When her mother passed in 1769, Dorothy was quickly noticed by Mrs. Lydia Hancock, the widow of Thomas Hancock and aunt to John, the wealthy merchant prince of the House of Hancock. Over time, Aunt Lydia became chaperon to Dorothy and matchmaker to the couple.

Dorothy was considered to be beautiful, cultured and according to a mention in the memoirs of the artist, John Singleton Copley, who painted her portrait in 1772, "among the distinguished women of the time ..."

So what first captivated the attention of Mr. John Hancock on that Sabbath morning as the soon to be love of his life stepped out of church? According to legend, it was Dorothy's daintily slipped feet! They married on Aug. 28, 1775 in Fairfield, CT. And the rest is history.

Visitors at the Homestead Saturday are invited to view one of Dorothy's "slippers" that are a part of the Homestead's museum collection as well as a love letter John Hancock sent to his intended before they married.

State Funding Federal Census Outreach Efforts

By SCOTT JACKSON

With the decennial federal census set for next year, state lawmakers allocated more than $5 million to ensure each and every resident is counted.

The state budget, which Gov. Charlie Baker signed into law July 31, includes $2.75 million for Secretary of State William Galvin for technical assistance and $2.5 million for the Complete Count Grant Program. The latter program will support efforts to count residents throughout the state, in particular residents in communities most likely to be undercounted.

Rep. Tackey Chan, in a recent interview, said it is important to count every resident during the census.

"This is very important. I have been preaching constantly wherever I go in a public setting about the importance of filling out the census. Obviously, we do this every ten years, but people forget why we do it. Obviously, it affects all the political issues — how many congressmen we get...your precinct lines," Chan said. "The City Council makes the precinct lines, but they are dependent on the census numbers. A good count may end up deciding what precinct you live in."

"It affects education money," Chan added. "It affects road money. It affects all the federal money. It affects how we do our projections on healthcare, because this is an accurate count, so it gives us an idea over the last decade of the birth rate, the death rate, who is heading for Medicare or Medicaid."

As part of the effort to count each and every resident of the Bay State, Chan said the Legislature set aside funds for local census offices in the western part of Massachusetts.

"Another thing we did on

SWISS AND LONDON BLUE TOPAZ

Naturally blue topaz is a rare occurrence in the gem world, but luckily clear topaz can be treated to create a variety of different glorious colors. Blue is the favorite color, and London blue and Swiss blue are the most popular choices. London blue topaz is darker and is slightly more expensive than Swiss blue, which has a lighter, brighter tonality. The color is produced by radiation in a nuclear reactor. If a lighter color blue is the goal, then the stone is further treated with that. Blue topaz is a popular stone for engagement rings and is exquisite when placed in a setting surrounded by diamonds or by a combination of diamonds and additional smaller topaz.

By SCOTT JACKSON

Boston's plan to rebuild the Long Island Bridge is fiscally irresponsible, said Rep. Bruce Ayers, who wants to ensure state taxpayers won't be asked to pick up the tab.

Boston Mayor Marty Walsh unveiled plans to rebuild the bridge — a three-year project with an estimated cost of $92 million — in January 2018. The bridge would connect Moon Island to Long Island, allowing Boston to open a recovery campus on the latter. Moon Island is within Quincy's city limits, though it is fully owned by Boston, and accessible only through Squantum.

Ayers and other Quincy officials — including Mayor Thomas Koch and Ward 6 Councillor William Harris — were quick to oppose the plan, citing the impact the bridge would have on traffic in Squantum and North Quincy.

"We have been working closely with the mayor's office and City Councillor Harris to oppose this at every step," Ayers said. "The mayor has obviously hired a great environmental law firm and engineering law firm."

The Quincy City Council in October approved a $250,000 appropriation Koch sought to fund bridge litigation and related legal and engineering work. The city has been working with the law firm Mackie Shea and the engineering firm Tighe & Bond to oppose the bridge.

Ayers has filed several cost, is fiscally irresponsible. bills relative to the future of Long Island. One calls for a study to determine the feasibility of using ferries to access the island instead of rebuilding the bridge.

"A ferry would be a more cost effective and environmentally friendly means of transportation to the island," Ayers said. "Water transportation now is the way we have been focusing a lot of our transportation needs in the commonwealth. If we have waterfront, we need now to take advantage of that access."

Boston officials have said the city would pay for the cost of the project in its entirety. Ayers, however, said the true cost of the project could top $125 million and wants to make sure state funds do not go towards the work.

"There are estimates now where it would be close to $125 million to rebuild the bridge. If the state were to pick up the tab — and here is where I've been fighting the fight so they can't dig into that pocket so to speak — we have 462 structurally deficient bridges in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts right now. A lot of those bridges bring commerce to their cities and towns," Ayers said.

"Peeling back the layers of the onion even further, when you look at the cars, average daily trips that use those bridges, they range anywhere from 20,000 to 200,000 cars per day. To spend over $100 million on a bridge to an island, where it could be [accessed] by a ferry for a fraction of the cost, is fiscally irresponsible.

"I've filed that legislation to force a feasibility study so that my colleagues...see that it would be just fiscally irresponsible to even entertain that idea. There are too many other bridges in the commonwealth that need that type of funding."

A separate bill introduced by Ayers would require Boston to allow public access to Long Island if state money is used to build the bridge or fund other work there.

"If public monies were to be spent on the bridge or on the island, then I feel it is only fair that people should have public access," he said. Ayers said he is not opposed to opening the recovery campus but said using a ferry to access the island — or opening such a facility on the mainland — would be more cost effective.

"I'm all for social services and helping out what they are trying to do out there, but there is a cheaper way to do it," he stated. "There are even locations closer to Boston that could be almost turnkey ready — some of the former hospitals that shut down. They are all designed for something like that for less money and a quicker turn-around time."

Another bill Ayers introduced would establish a commission to study the long-term management, maintenance and future use of both Long Island and Moon Island.

"Basically, it would set up a commission made up of residents from Quincy and Boston appointed by mayors — environmental people — to basically come up with some short- and long-range goals we can agree upon," he said.

Ayers also filed a bill asking the state Department of Fish and Game to study the feasibility of converting the former sewage treatment tanks on Moon Island to fish and shellfish farms. That bill was reportedly favorably out of the Joint Committee on Environment, Natural Resources and Agriculture in July and referred to House Committee on Ways and Means.

Ayers said the four storage tanks, which can each hold up to 50 million gallons of water, present the state with a unique opportunity.

"My intent was to find a positive use for the former sewage vats out there. What makes this unique is it is in the middle of an island, it has water on both sides and, believe it or not, there are four granite-cut storage tanks that have 50 million gallon capacity. They are huge," Ayers said.

"This would be something that would be a positive use for that piece of land out there. It is something we have talked to the schools about that are interested in pursuing this — educational grants and things like that down the road.

"It's good for the water quality. It could be an oyster farm — oysters basically clean up the water — a fish farm, eel grass. Different kinds of environmentally positive things could be used out there."

Ayers: Commuters Deserve More Options

of the plan for permanent ferry service. The extension of the road means commuters no longer need to travel through Marina Bay's network of private roads to reach the ferry.

"That is part of our plan and our vision, so to speak, to eventually make a permanent ferry service at Squantum Point Park," Ayers said. "We knew from working with some of the public, particularly the Marina Bay residents, that we needed to come up with another means of access. That is a direct shot to right to it."

The recently approved state budget included $100,000 for the Squantum Point Park ferry. Ayers said that appropriation would be used for infrastructure work and future work to prepare the site for permanent ferry service.

"That is to be used for infrastructure repairs and future build out for the ferry," he said. "We have traditionally been able to successfully secure funding over the last five to ten years to keep our eye on the prize, which is to establish a long-term ferry service there."

The site, Ayers added, is largely ready for permanent ferry service.

"There is general maintenance that we work on depending on what the winter holds, there may be some additional dredging, but we've got a unique footprint," he said. "I think a lot of cities and towns with waterfront property would love to have that footprint — of course it is from the old Deer Island days when they built the parking lot — the pier, the dock, everything is right there."

Ayers, who is the vice chairman of the Joint Committee on Tourism, Arts and Cultural Development, said he has spoken to officials from other communities, like Plymouth, about partnering with Quincy to provide tourists with transportation to and from the ferry.

"I've talked to people down in Plymouth and up on the North Shore — tourism folks — they would be more than happy to partner with Quincy to be able to take transportation to and from," Ayers said. "When you think about, it's really a natural."

The ferry, he said, would be beneficial for tourism.

"As vice chairman of the Joint Committee on Tourism, I realize how important those dollars are," Ayers said. "Tourism is the number three industry in the commonwealth outside of education and health care. We obviously want to encourage more dollars coming into the commonwealth, coming into my district. Tourism dollars are other people's money."

"If it is promoted properly, it works. To not utilize that would be a huge disadvantage."

The Board of Managers of Quincy City Hospital planned to meet to appoint a new hospital director succeeding Harlan Paine who still held the position.

The leading candidate to succeed Paine appeared to be Anthony DeFalco, former deputy governor under Governor John A. Volpe.

Edward V. Cronin, chairman of the board of managers, said that Paine had not resigned but "if we vote someone else in then he is a good as fired. He had his chance and he didn't want to play ball with us."

Paine who had been hospital director since 1962, sought a three-year contract at a special meeting of the board, but said Cronin, "he has asked that his request be taken from the agenda."

Cronin said the board was in the process of screening and interviewing some 40 or 50 candidates for the $32,000 post and that a final selection would be made at the Aug. 24 meeting.

CREEDON: NQHS SHOULD OPEN ON TIME

North Quincy High School probably would open on time (Sept. 8) but it is going to be close.

"I'm not willing to say definitely," said School Superintendent Dr. Lawrence P. Creedon.

The problem is that most of the building's utilities are being moved from the rear of the school to the front to make way for the $13.5 million renovation and addition project.

"We got off to a late start," said Creedon, "because the renovation issue was not resolved until June 11."

If the school misses the Sept. 8 deadline by one day, "we can postpone the opening," Creedon said.

The state requires that schools be open 185 days a year in order to qualify for full state aid.

the state level is we put census offices west of Worcester. The U.S. government - I don't know why - has only provided census offices east of Worcester, so the Legislature has put up money specifically to include Western Mass. with census offices," Chan explained.

Earlier this year, Quincy officials - including Mayor Thomas Koch, City Clerk Nicole Crispo and former city clerk Joseph Shea, a census liaison - said they would be making an all-out push to put Quincy's official population above the 100,000 mark. The city had a census count of 92,721 in 2010 and an estimated population of 96,000 in 2016.

Chan said surpassing the 100,000-resident threshold would be important for Quincy, because it would make the city eligible for additional funding from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

"Getting the count is also important for Quincy. I think Joe Shea, Nicky and the mayor said this already," he said. "If we crack 100,000 [people], it changes the HUD money."

"At the local level," Chan added, "we're going to be working very hard to go to senior housing, go to neighborhood groups, go to QATV, The Quincy Sun and Patriot Ledger and everyone else to remind people to fill out the census."

Chan planned to meet with Galvin's office to discuss outreach efforts that will be made to ensure the state's Asian-American residents are counted.

"While I advocate for the city, I still have to think about the whole state - the bigger issue too," Chan said. "I'm very concerned about other neighborhoods with people of color and people who don't speak English around the state getting their census forms filled out too, because it impacts all of us if they don't fill out those forms."

"I would like to keep a congressman - I don't want to lose one."

He said Quincy Asian Resources, Inc., would play a role in the outreach efforts, as it did during the last federal census in 2010.

"There is a strong interest from QARI," Chan said. "It's the neighborhood organization - it's the local organization - they have done it before 10 years ago. It's not like a new thing, and they are embedded in the community."

President Donald Trump's administration had proposed adding a question about citizenship to next year's census, but the Supreme Court in June rejected the administration's stated reason for doing so and remanded the matter back to the Commerce Department. The department has begun printing census forms without the question.

Chan welcomed the Supreme Court's ruling.

"Everyone knows my position is that we shouldn't have citizenship status as part of the census because they don't understand what they are trying to do with it," he said. "The U.S. Supreme Court has struck down the U.S. Census Bureau from putting the information on and the forms have gone to print."

Medical Examiner Rules McCallum Death A Homicide

Quincy Native Died From Blunt Force Head Trauma From Fall During Physical Altercation

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The death of a former Quincy man who was fatally injured in a physical altercation outside an American Legion Post in Squantum in January has been ruled a homicide by the state medical examiner.

According to the death certificate filed Tuesday with the Boston City Clerk's office, Christopher McCallum, 44, of Bridgewater, died from blunt force trauma of the head from a fall during a physical altercation. The manner of death on the death certificate is listed as homicide.

McCallum, a Quincy native and father of three, died Jan. 28 at Boston Medical Center, one day after he was found bleeding and unconscious in the parking lot of the Robert I. Nickerson American Legion Post on Moon Island Road after police responded to reports of a "large disorder" outside the hall at 20 Moon Island

Rd.

No arrests have been made in the investigation since McCallum's death more than six months ago. The case is under investigation by the Norfolk County District Attorney's office which has said the case remains open. Few details about the investigation have been provided.

On Tuesday, after the death certificate filing, DA spokesperson David Traub said:

"The investigation into Mr. McCallum's death remains active and ongoing, The Norfolk District Attorney's Office has no further comment at this time."

McCallum's family said in a statement they are relieved to have the finalized medical examiner report.

"We look forward to the completion of the State Police and District Attorneys Office criminal investigation. We are confident that the justice system will prevail for Chris McCallum and his family," the statement said.

Family members have said McCallum was at the Nickerson Post the night of Jan. 26 to attend a concert and was fatally injured after midnight while attempting to break up a fight that erupted after a group of men attempted to re-enter the building after being kicked out earlier.

McCallum is survived by his wife, Kathleen "Kathy" (Doyle), and their three sons, Ryan, Michael and Christopher.

McCallum grew up on Deerfield Street in Squantum and was a 1992 graduate of North Quincy High School. He was captain of the Red Raiders football and hockey teams his senior year and was inducted into the Quincy-North Quincy High Football Hall of Fame in 2016.

McCallum then attended the Massachusetts Maritime Academy, where he continued playing football, and graduated in 1996. He went on to work as an engineer after college.

More than 500 people attended a candlelight vigil in McCallum's memory Feb. 15 outside the Squantum Elementary School.

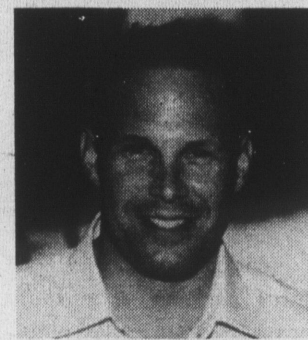

"Chris was assaulted Jan. 27 at the Nickerson Post here in Squantum as he tried to break up a fight and he suffered a fatal head injury," Kathy McCallum told the crowd that evening. "We are extremely appreciative to the Massachusetts State Police for their unending efforts to seek justice for Chris and our family."

Kathy McCallum urged anyone who knew what happened to her husband to come forward to investigators.

"Please clear your conscience and tell the truth - even lies of omission lead to injustice" she said.

"As our families struggle to move forward in a world without Chris, we ask that in his memory and in remembrance of how he lived, please be kind to one another."

William McCallum, Christopher's father, said his son was unselfish and kind.

CHRISTOPHER McCALLUM

"If anyone ever needed any help, he was the first one there to help. He'd drive 30 miles from Bridgewater to Squantum to help me," William McCallum told The Sun at the vigil. "He'd do anything. He'd even come over on his lunch hour to help."

"He was just a great guy - and I'm not saying that because he was my son. He was just a great overall guy."

Dan Gilmartin, a friend of McCallum for more than 30 years, remembered him as a "heck of an athlete, but more than that he was a true gentleman. I remembered him handling himself with class and dignity even as a kid. He was a big, tough guy, but he was always gentle and kind. He was always smiling and always the first one to stick his hand out to help somebody."

Vanilla Cupcakes

By MARIE

I have always been a fan of anything flavored with vanilla.

From vanilla ice cream to vanilla wafers so when I found today's recipe for a vanilla cupcake it was right up my alley.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees; line 12-cup muffin tin with cupcake liners

Directions and Ingredients:

CUPCAKE RECIPE

- 1 and 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon of baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 sticks unsalted butter - softened at room temperature
- 1 cup of sugar
- 2 large eggs
- 2 teaspoons of pure vanilla extract
- 1/2 cup whole milk

FROSTING RECIPE

- 1 and 1/2 sticks butter at room temperature
- 3 cups confectionery sugar
- A pinch of salt
- 2 teaspoons of vanilla extract
- 2 tablespoons of whole milk

For the cupcakes: Mix flour, baking powder and salt in a medium bowl, blend well and set aside.

In a large bowl, at medium speed, beat butter until smooth for about a minute. Then add sugar and beat until creamy.

Beat in eggs one at a time and then add vanilla mixing well.

Add the dry ingredients alternately with the milk and mix until smooth and well blended.

Divide the batter among the muffin tins and bake for 20 - 25 minutes and let cool for 5 minutes in pan before moving to a wire rack.

For the frosting: Beat butter, sugar and salt until combined. Add vanilla and beat until creamy and then add milk until fluffy. Frost cupcakes when cooled. Enjoy!

Healthy Chocolate Chip Cookies

By SUSIE

These cookies are to die for . . . using almond butter and almond flour eliminates the need for nutrient deficient and insulin raising regular flours.

Make sure you use blanched almond flour which is much lighter and fluffier than almond meal. Your cookies will be too oily and will not come out properly, so this is an important note.

These make a great snack when you want something sweet and decadent. I love to make a double batch and freeze them once they are cooked in freezer bags so I always can have a cookie when I want.

Homemade is always best! Enjoy!

Best Healthy Chocolate Chip Cookies

By LIZ MOODY

- 1 large egg
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1/2 cup unsalted creamy almond butter (well stirred)

- 1/4 cup almond flour
- 1/4 teaspoon fine-grain sea salt
- 1/2 cup coconut sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon baking soda
- 1/4 cup chopped walnuts
- 1/4 cup rolled oats
- 1/4 cup dark chocolate chips or chopped dark chocolate

Directions

1. Preheat the oven to 375°F. Line a baking sheet with parchment paper.

2. In a large bowl, beat together with a large spoon the egg, vanilla, and almond butter until combined. Stir in the almond flour, salt, coconut sugar, and baking soda until smooth. Stir in the walnuts, oats, and chocolate chips, working the dough a bit to get everything distributed evenly (the dough will be thick - that's okay).

3. Scoop the dough into rounded teaspoonfuls and drop them onto the prepared baking sheet.

4. Bake for 10 to 15 minutes, until the edges turn golden brown.

What Is Cellulite And Effective Remedies

A Message From Ruth Jones, City Of Quincy Health Commissioner

By RUTH JONES
MSPH, BSN, RN,
BC, CP-FS

Cellulite is the dimpled appearance of the skin that some people possess on their hips, thighs, and buttocks. Cellulite is much more common in women than in men due to differences in the mechanism that fat cells, muscle, and connective tissue are distributed in men's and women's skin. Fat deposits that push and distort the connective tissues beneath skin instigate the appearance of lumpiness, leading to the characteristic changes in the appearance of the skin. Physicians refer to cellulite as edematous fibrosclerotic panniculopathy (EFP).

The indented appearance of cellulite is a normal variant, and often is perfectly typical in many human beings. Heredity, skin thickness, gender, the quantity and distribution of body fat, and age can all influence the extent to which cellulite is present or noticeable. Cellulite arises due to shrinkage or shortening of the fibrous tissue cords that anchor the skin. Although cellulite is more frequently seen in women than men, men also can develop this issue. Cellulite appears in people of all races living all worldwide. Even though female hormones may be a factor in contributing to this pattern of fat distribution, cellulite is not treatable by hormone therapy. Having a family history of cellulite is an additional risk factor, while pregnancy and a sedentary lifestyle may increase the risk of developing this condition.

Cellulite is not directly a function of excess weight, but a genetic variance in the way adipose tissue and connective tissue form. As a matter of fact, cellulite affects people whether they are overweight or not. Biochemically, cellulite does not behave in a different way than other fat, and has no detrimental health risk. In contrast, some evidence even suggests that lower extremity fat may have a protective benefit against chronic diseases like diabetes and heart disease.

Because cellulite is a cosmetic matter, aesthetic physicians, including plastic surgeons and some dermatologists, may propose various treatments for this condition. Medical studies have shown some of these remedies to be effective including the following:

- Acoustic wave therapy (AWT): This technique applies acoustic waves, also referred to as sound, pressure or shockwaves, to the affected areas. Normally, multiple treatments and maintenance treatments are required. Lipotripsy is another term for AWT.

- Laser, light, or radio-frequency therapy: The U.S. FDA has approved certain light-therapy devices that combine suction or massage with light therapy for the temporary reduction of the appearance of cellulite. TriActive is a treatment that combines a low-level laser treatment with suction and manipulation of the skin. Velasmoth/Velashape is a treatment combining laser and massage therapy. These treatments usually require numerous treatment sessions and maintenance treatments to sustain the enhanced appearance. Other systems use radiofrequency therapy in combination with massage and infrared light or radiofrequency at multiple levels simultaneously. One minimally invasive laser treatment, called Cellulaze, involves insertion of a tiny laser fiber beneath the skin.

- Subcision: This is a procedure that involves insertion of a needle underneath the skin to break up bands of fibrous connective tissue that separate the clusters of fat cells. Results of this technique can last up to two years or more.

- Vacuum-assisted precise tissue release: This newer procedure can help break up the tough bands of fibrous tissue that contribute to the appearance of cellulite. The physician utilizes a device containing small blades to cut the tough tissue bands. Consequently, the fat tissue moves upward to fill out and diminish the look of dimpled skin.

Physicians caution against utilizing the following treatments due to lack of sufficient medical evidence for their effectiveness:

- Mesotherapy: A controversial treatment for cellulite that involves injecting drugs or other substances directly into affected tissue.

- Dietary supplements: A number of these products have been marketed and contain a variety of ingredients such as ginkgo biloba, sweet clover, grape-seed bioflavonoids, bladder wrack extract, oil of evening primrose, fish oil and soy lecithin. There is no substantial evidence that these items are effective and some dietary supplements for cellulite treatment may also pose health risks or may interact with certain prescription drugs.

- Cryolipolysis: is a procedure that freezes small areas of unwanted fat. While it may reduce fat deposits, it does not lessen the appearance of cellulite.

- Cellulite diets: Special cellulite diets claim to be effective in treating cellulite. Nonetheless, no research or studies published in the medical literature have supported these claims.

- Wraps: Many salons offer herbal or other types of body wraps as therapies for cellulite. As is the case with cellulite diets, controlled studies in the medical literature have not substantiated the effects of wraps.

Ruth Jones is the health commissioner for the City of Quincy.

Quincy Dentist Named Volunteer Hero By Massachusetts Dental Society

Dr. Pelly Chang, a general dentist practicing in Quincy and clinical associate professor of general dentistry at the Boston University Henry M. Goldman School of Dental Medicine (BUGSDM), has been recognized as the 2019 William McKenna Volunteer Hero by the Massachusetts Dental Society (MDS), a statewide organization serving more than 5,000 member dentists.

Since 1996, the MDS and the Journal of the Massachusetts Dental Society have been honoring local dentists who have dedicated their enthusiasm, talents, and countless hours to the community, the MDS, and the profession of dentistry. The Volunteer Hero recognition is named in honor of the late Dr. William H. McKenna, a model of volunteerism within the Society and a driving force behind the development of the Yankee Dental Congress, New England's largest meeting for dental professionals.

Dr. Chang was acknowledged by her peers for substantial contributions to organized dentistry at both the state and local district levels. She is actively involved in the MDS, having volunteered at every Yankee Dental Congress since she joined the Society in 1989, including as presiding chair. Dr. Chang also has been a delegate to the MDS House of Delegates, the Society's supreme authoritative body, and chair of the South Shore District Dental Society.

Dr. Chang, who was raised in Taiwan and immigrated to the United States in 1987, recounted how her parents were very charitable to their community. Her mother always helped their neighbors and families in need, and her father—a high-ranking army colonel pharmacist in charge of a medical hospital in Taiwan—always took care of his soldiers and staff there.

"Now, it is time for me to continue my parents' legacy by giving my time and skills and volunteering to help underprivileged kids in my community and through organized dentistry with the MDS and BUGSDM," Dr. Chang said.

As a member of the MDS Leadership Institute Ad Hoc Committee in 2014, Dr. Chang helped organize the first TeamSmile event with the MDS, which was held at the Yankee Dental Congress in 2015.

"At the event, I saw the happy faces of all the children after they had their teeth cleaned or sealants applied, got their new toothbrush, and played with [Boston Red Sox mascot] Wally the Green Monster," she said. "This experience motivated me to do more charitable events like this when my time allows."

According to MDS President Janis Moriarty, DMD, Dr. Chang has a true passion for volunteerism, especially when it comes to giving back to underserved children in need of access to care.

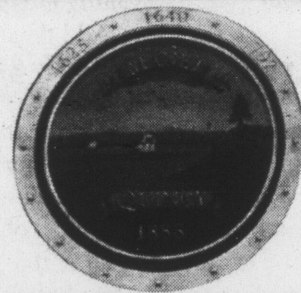

Dr. Moriarty said, "She is usually one of the first volunteers to sign up—and likely the last volunteer to leave!"

Dr. Chang is an active faculty participant in BUGSDM Global Days of Service and has been an annual volunteer at many local charity events with her students, such as Christmas in the City, Rosie's Place, Cradles to Crayons, and the Greater Boston Food Bank. She also has participated in volunteer efforts through the American Student Dental Association and the American Association for Women Dentists.

Dr. Chang has helped raise money for cancer research through her participation with the MDS Miles and Smiles Team in the Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk.

During her tenure as chair of the South Shore District Dental Society in 2018, Dr. Chang spearheaded a District donation to the MDS Foundation, the charitable arm of the Society, and worked to encourage other District chairs to recommend their Districts do the same.

Dr. Chang earned her Bachelor of Dental Surgery from Chung-Shen Medical and Dental School in Taiwan. She received her Doctor of Medicine in Dentistry from Boston University in 1989.

Neighbors: Myrtle Street Building Too Big

By SCOTT JACKSON

Neighbors said a proposed five-story, 45-unit condominium building on Myrtle Street in North Quincy would overshadow their homes and contribute to traffic in the area.

Charles McCarthy has proposed constructing the new building at 85-105 Myrtle St., a 30,400-square-foot parcel of land in a Residential B zoning district. The proposal went before the Planning Board on Aug. 7; the board did not vote on the plan that night and the item was continued until Oct. 9.

Edward Fleming, McCarthy's attorney, said the section of Myrtle Street where the proposed building would be located is an eyesore.

"The site over the years since the Newport Avenue extension came into play was...utilized by commercial vehicles and littered with commercial debris. The character of the neighborhood changed dramatically," Fleming said.

"It really became an eyesore for the folks who live on Walnut Street...Walnut Street, unlike Myrtle Street, remained a residential neighborhood."

Each of the 45 condos would include two bedrooms and would range in size from 900 to 1,200 square feet, according to architect Shane Losi. The building would also house a fitness center and an additional communal room for its residents.

The end of the proposed building nearest Sagamore Creek would stand five stories tall while the remainder of the building would be three stories. A total of 90 parking spaces would be provided on site in a two-level garage located on the lower levels of the building. Each level of the garage would have its own entrance on Myrtle Street.

Gregory Galvin, a member of the Planning Board, said he felt the five-story section of the building would be too tall.

"The five-story sections of the building, it towers over 92 Walnut St.," Galvin said. "I just can't go with five stories at the end of the project. It looks so out of place there. I understand you're seeking to improve the area, but it is a give and take."

Mary Jones, who lives at 92 Walnut St., said she was appalled by the proposed building.

"This five-story end of the building would be 15 feet from my house...

would you like to live like that?" Jones said. "I don't know what else to add, but I am just appalled. Forty years in this house and I might as well throw it away if this goes through."

Jones was not alone in opposing the plan - five others spoke against it during the public hearing.

Thomas Robinson, who also lives on Walnut Street, said the proposed building would overshadow his home.

"That house would be in complete shadow all day, never getting complete sunlight," Robinson said of his home. "I believe that's the reason for setbacks...so people don't live in the shadow of a big building like this."

Edward Smith, who owns the property at 64-84 Myrtle Street, said traffic is already problematic in the area and suggested the project be scaled down. The office building at 108 Myrtle St., he said, has 300 employees who all exit the site at the same time each day.

"The end of Myrtle Street, building 108, has 300 employees. They all exit every night at 5 while I'm locking up - traffic jam galore trying to get out. The neighbors don't stand a chance up there if they are putting in 90 vehicles,"

Smith said.

"I'm not against development - I think development is good for the city. I think it's too big. Scale it down [and] maybe put townhouses in instead."

Fleming, the applicant's attorney, said residents living inside the proposed building would leave the site while nearby office workers were headed in the opposite direction, and those residents would come home while the office workers were leaving.

"The traffic that will be leaving this complex will be leaving in the morning while all the traffic is coming to the State Street complex and it will be coming back at night when all the traffic is trying to leave [State Street]," Fleming said.

The developer completed a traffic study as part of the application, Fleming added; the city's traffic department and peer reviewer will review that as they review the application.

The board did not take a vote on the matter while the project is being reviewed by city departments and the peer reviewer. Richard Meade, the chairman of the Planning Board, asked the applicant to complete a shadow study ahead of the October meeting, which Fleming agreed to.

State Officials To Review Beachcomber Plans

By SCOTT JACKSON

Plans to build a new restaurant on the site of the Beachcomber will be reviewed by state environmental officials before the city's permitting process continues.

The new owners of the former nightclub, located at 797 Quincy Shore Dr., have proposed razing the existing building on site and constructing a new one in its place. The property contains nearly 60,000 square feet of land in a Residential A zoning district and a flood plain overlay district.

The new building would stand three stories tall and include multiple dining options, with professional office space on the upper floor.

Parking for 89 vehicles would be provided on site.

The proposal was on the agenda for the Planning Board's Aug. 7 meeting, but the board's hearing on the item was continued so state officials can review the plan.

Edward Fleming, the attorney for the applicant, said the project requires an environmental notification form (ENF) filing as part of the Massachusetts Environmental Policy Act review and a Chapter 91 license from the state because of its proximity to waterfront.

Fleming said the Planning Department asked his client to seek approval from the state before going further with the city's permitting process.

"The primary issue of concern...is the flooding in the neighborhood and the neighbors have raised their concerns about the manner in which we designed the drainage system to appropriately address the flooding. I think the department feels comfortable, and we do as well, that the state gets involved at that higher level of review," Fleming said.

"When they complete their review, we will come back to this body and be able to address the appropriate drainage plans. It should give the neighbors a sense of comfort knowing that not only is this department going to review it...but now the state level is also going to be involved."

The Planning Board hearing on the matter was continued until Nov. 13 to allow the state agencies to complete their review.

Social Security Matters About Survivor Benefits

By RUSSELL GLOOR

AMAC Certified Social Security Advisor
Association Of Mature American Citizens

Dear Rusty: I am looking for information on my benefits. I am 60 years and 5 months old, and still employed. My spouse died in 2017 and would have been 61 years and 9 months old on July 31, 2019. My husband was the more highly compensated employee and was employed longer than myself. Signed: A Survivor

Dear Survivor: You are eligible for a survivor benefit from your deceased husband because you are now 60, but that survivor benefit will be considerably reduced (by about 28.5%) if you take it now. The survivor benefit is reduced if taken before your widow's full retirement age (which is 66 ½ for you). Taken at your widow's full retirement age (FRA) you'd be entitled to 100% of the benefit your deceased husband had earned at his passing. But if you take the survivor benefit now - before your normal full retirement age (66 years and 10 months) - and you are working you'll be subject to Social Security's "earnings limit." If you exceed the limit, it will cause Social Security to withhold some of your survivor benefits. The 2019 earnings limit is $17,640 and it will increase slightly each year until the year you reach your normal FRA, when it will increase by about 2 ½ times; then when you reach your normal FRA there is no earnings limit. What all of that means is that if you take the survivor benefit now and continue to work and earn, your survivor benefit will be reduced from what it could be, and Social Security will take back some benefits if you exceed the earnings limit (they'll take back $1 for every $2 you are over the limit).

Assuming you have earned the requisite 40 credits from your own career, you will be eligible for your own Social Security retirement benefit at age 62, though your own benefit would also be reduced if you take it early (the reduction for your own benefit at age 62 will be about 29.2%). Since at 62 you will have a choice to take either the survivor benefit or your own benefit, you may want to set a goal of getting the highest possible benefit for the rest of your life. To do that I suggest you determine whether the maximum benefit you can get on your own work record (at age 70) is more than the maximum survivor benefit you can get at your widow's FRA, and then follow a strategy which yields the highest benefit. You can get those numbers by contacting Social Security directly and asking for your own Statement of Estimated Benefits, and also asking for what your maximum survivor benefit will be. You can get the statement for your own estimated benefits online by creating a "My Social Security" account, but you will need to contact Social Security directly to get your maximum survivor benefit amount.

Once you are 62, you will have a choice of which benefit to choose and when to choose it. So, if your own SS benefit on your own work record will be more at age 70 than your survivor benefit will be at your widow's FRA, you should consider taking the survivor benefit first and delaying your own benefit until it reaches maximum, at which point you would switch to your own benefit. However, if your own maximum benefit at age 70 will be less than the maximum survivor benefit you can get at your widow's full retirement age, then you may wish to wait until you reach your widow's full retirement age (66 ½) to claim the maximum survivor benefit. If you wait until your widow's FRA to claim the maximum survivor benefit, and you need additional income while you're waiting, you can claim only your own SS benefit at age 62 but remember that if you do so the earnings limit will still apply to your own SS retirement benefit until you reach your normal full retirement age.

Koch, Kempe Draw Top Ballot Spots In Preliminary Election

Drawing For Ballot Position Held Monday For Sept. 10th Run-Off For Mayor, Ward 1

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

One incumbent and one challenger drew the top spots Monday for ballot position in the preliminary election which will be held in less than four weeks next month.

Mayor Thomas Koch will be listed first followed by challengers Brenda Ryan of 14 Cranch St. and Tracey Dorgan of 108 Sherman St. in the city-wide mayoral run-off Sept. 10. Dorgan was the only mayoral candidate who attended the drawing Monday.

Koch, who lives at 249 Newbury Ave., is seeking his sixth term and second straight four-year term. He has served as the city's mayor since 2008 and with a win in November would become the longest serving mayor in Quincy surpassing Amelio Della Chiesa and James Sheets who both served 12 years. Della Chiesa served four years under Plan E and eight years under Plan A; Sheets served all 12 years under Plan A, the current form of city government.

In the Ward 1 city council preliminary election, challenger Danielle Kempe of 1 Adams St. drew the top spot. Challenger Joseph Murphy of 18 Macy St. will be listed second and incumbent David McCarthy of 48 Whitney Rd. who is seeking his second two-year term will be third on the ballot. Both Kempe and McCarthy attended the ballot drawing Monday; Murphy was not present.

The drawing for ballot position was conducted by City Clerk Nicole Crispo and Assistant City Clerk Joseph Newton Monday morning at 10 a.m. in the hallway of City Hall between the Election Office and City Clerk's Office. Each candidate was assigned a numbered token which was placed in a red opaque container resembling a small milk bottle. The order of the tokens drawn was the order of the candidate position on the ballot.

Koch and McCarthy, because they are incumbents, will have "candidate for re-election" under their name and address on the preliminary ballot. The challengers will have their name and addresses on the Sept. 10th ballot.

The top two vote-getters in the mayoral preliminary and the Ward 1 council preliminary will be nominated and advance to the final election Tuesday, Nov. 5.

Election officials said the cost of the preliminary election is about $80,000 which covers the printing of ballots, renting halls for polling locations and paying election workers and police officers.

For the final election ballot, incumbents will be listed first followed by challengers in alphabetical order.

Polls will be open Tuesday, Sept. 10 and Tuesday, Nov. 5 from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Crispo said voting by absentee ballot for the preliminary election should begin sometime next week after the ballots are printed. Absentee voting will continue Monday through Friday at the Election Office during regular business hours until noontime on Monday, Sept. 9.

Last day to register to vote for the Sept. 10th preliminary is 8 p.m. on Wednesday, Aug. 21.

Besides the mayor's race and Ward 1 council race there will be five other contested races in the Nov. 5th final election: councillor at-large, school committee and council seats in Ward 3, 5 and 6.

There are five candidates running for three at-large city council seats: incumbents Noel DiBona of 70 Chickatabot Rd., Nina Liang of 2 Williams St. and Anne Mahoney of 12 Ferriter St. and challengers Frank Rubino of 5 Whiton Ave. and Joann Sullivan Cantor of 316 Fenno St. DiBona and Liang are seeking their third two-year terms and Mahoney is running for her second term.

DRAWING FOR POSITION for the Sept. 10th preliminary election ballot was held outside the City Clerk's office, glass annex building of City Hall, Monday morning. Three of the six candidates who will appear on the preliminary ballot join election officials after the drawing. From left to right: Ward 1 Councillor David McCarthy, City Clerk Nicole Crispo, Ward 1 council challenger Danielle Kempe, mayoral challenger Tracey Dorgan and Assistant City Clerk Joseph Newton. Candidates who did not attend the drawing were Mayor Thomas Koch and mayoral challenger Brenda Ryan; and Ward 1 council challenger Joseph Murphy. The top two vote-getters in the mayoral preliminary and Ward 1 preliminary will advance to the final election Nov. 5.

Four candidates are vying for three seats on the school committee. They are: incumbents Paul Bregoli of 80 Willow Ave. and Kathryn Hubley of 44 Marion St. and two challengers: Courtney Perdios of 86 Ruggles St. and Frank Santoro of 14 Lois Ter. Bregoli and Hubley are each seeking their third four-year term on the committee. Santoro previously served on the committee for two terms as well.

James DeAmicis, whose term is up on the school committee, is not seeking a second term.

There are two candidates running for the Ward 3 city council seat: incumbent Ian Cain of 8 Highpoint Cir. and challenger Eriberto Soto, Jr., of 627 Adams St. Cain is seeking his third two-year term.

The Ward 5 city council seat is being vacated by Kirsten Hughes who is not seeking re-election. There are two candidates for the seat: Stephen Christo of 42

Standish Ave. and Charles Phelan of 298 Fenno St. Phelan formerly represented Ward 5 on the council from 1988 to 1996.

There are two candidates seeking the Ward 6 council seat: incumbent William Harris of 74 Ashworth Rd. and challenger William Isenberg of 36 Carle St. Harris is seeking his third term.

Two city councillors are unopposed on ballot: Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall of 92 Viden Rd. and Ward 4

Councillor Brian Palmucci of 16 Cross St. Croall is seeking his fifth term and Palmucci is seeking his sixth.

The last day to register to vote for the Nov. 5th election is Wednesday, Oct. 16.

Ayers Files Alzheimer's Legislation

By SCOTT JACKSON

A bill introduced by Rep. Bruce Ayers and co-sponsored by 120 of his colleagues on Beacon Hill would make MassHealth benefits available to patients with early-onset Alzheimer's disease regardless of their age, provided they are otherwise eligible for such services.

Ayers filed the bill in January. It has been referred to the Joint Committee on Elder Affairs, a committee on which he serves.

Ayers said he introduced the bill after the wife of a friend of his was diagnosed with early-onset Alzheimer's while she was in her 40s. She was too young to qualify for MassHealth benefits, Ayers said, and the couple wound up selling their home to pay for her treatments.

"I had a friend of mine come to me. His wife was on MassHealth. She came down with early-onset Alzheimer's in her late 40s and they didn't qualify because there was an age restriction of 60 years old," Ayers said recently in an interview.

"They ended up putting themselves in a pretty big financial crisis. He ended up having to sell his house, he had to retire early, just to pay for the costs associated of caring for his wife who was suffering from Alzheimer's."

Sales Down, Lending Activity Up In Norfolk County

A small decrease in Norfolk County real estate sales transactions was more than offset by an impressive spike in mortgage lending activity during the recently concluded month of July, according to a new report released by Register of Deeds William O'Donnell.

"During July, a total of 1,761 residential and commercial properties were sold in Norfolk County, representing a modest two percent decrease year over year," O'Donnell said. "Inventory issues, particularly the lack of starter homes, are continuing to stifle growth in the Norfolk County real estate market."

Total real estate sales volume, both residential and commercial, for the month of July was $893 million, a 16 percent decrease year over year. This figure was impacted by two commercial real estate sales of $64 million and $96.5 million recorded in July 2018. In addition, the average sales price, again for both residential and commercial properties, was $718,518, a 14 percent decrease compared to the previous year. "Time will tell," O'Donnell said, "whether or not these figures portend a thaw in the Norfolk County real estate market."

The encouraging news that came out of July's numbers was seen in lending activity. The number of mortgages recorded during the month was 2,950, a significant 28 percent increase year over year. For the month, total mortgage borrowing jumped by 119 percent to $2.1 billion. The total borrowing figure was impacted by 2 large residential multi-family mortgages, one in Quincy totaling $426 million and the other recorded against a Franklin property totaling $384 million.

"A reduction in mortgage interest rates is having a positive effect on the Norfolk County lending market," O'Donnell said.

Another bright spot was the continuing decline in foreclosure activity, a trend seen for the past few months. A total of 8 foreclosure deeds were processed during July compared to 20 recorded in July 2018, resulting in a 60 percent decline. In addition, 29 Notice to Foreclose Mortgage recordings, the first step in the foreclosure process, were filed during the month versus 38 recorded in July of 2018, a decline of 24 percent.

"We severely underestimate the effect of foreclosures if we simply look at them as just a bunch of numbers," O'Donnell said. "Foreclosure activity has a human face. Some of our neighbors struggle to pay their monthly mortgage and sometimes fall short through no fault of their own. Families face economic hardships as a result of a sudden job loss or a catastrophic medical event. This is why the Registry of Deeds directs homeowners to the Quincy Community Action Programs at (617) 479-8181 x-376 and NeighborWorks Housing Solutions at (617) 770-2227 x-346 to help anyone who has received a Notice to Foreclose Mortgage from a lending institution. Another option is to contact the Massachusetts Attorney General's Consumer Advocacy and Response Division (CARD) at (617) 727-8400."

On the consumer front, Homestead recordings were slightly up during the month of July. A total of 1,300 Homesteads were recorded, a 3 percent increase compared to the previous year.

Neighbors Oppose Newcomb St. Building

By SCOTT JACKSON

More than a dozen residents voiced their opposition to a proposed 39-unit building on Newcomb Street in Quincy Center, objecting to the project because of its size and because of the impact it could have on traffic.

The Planning Board did not vote on the proposal during its meeting on Aug. 7. Board member John Ryan asked for a continuance to Sept. 11 to give the applicant and neighbors time to come to a compromise.

Developer Stephen Niosi has proposed constructing the new building at 29-31 and 35-39 Newcomb St. The site contains 26,135 square feet of land in a Business C zoning district. The building would stand five stories tall. The bottom two levels would include 64 parking spaces, while the 39 residential units would be divided between the three upper floors.

Rob Fleming, Niosi's attorney, said the developer scaled down the project from a six-story, 52-unit building with 77 parking spaces following a previous meeting on the matter based on feedback from residents.

"My client, over the next few months, made substantial revisions to respond to those concerns," Fleming said.

Residents who spoke during the Aug. 7 meeting said Niosi's proposal was still too large.

"The building is just too big for the lot," said Stephen Holochuck of Francis Avenue. "It's just a huge, massive building that basically spreads out in every direction and is really very snug and very tall where it sits. It just overshadows everything."

Thomas Stansbury of Newcomb Street said residents wanted something that would better fit in with the surrounding neighborhood.

"That's all we're asking for — something that would just fit in the neighborhood, not something that is overshadowing everything," he said. "We're not an extension of Quincy Square."

Louise O'Brien, who also lives on Newcomb Street, said the road would not be able to accommodate traffic from the proposed building.

"There is absolutely no room for this building and more traffic," she said.

"They want to build something, that's fine, but it is just way too big for our neighborhood. All those extra cars and all that extra traffic just is not going to work on Newcomb Street."

Ward 1 Councillor David McCarthy said he was opposed to proposal and commended the area residents for their comments. McCarthy said traffic on Newcomb Street is already difficult, given the proximity of the YMCA and Quincy High School, and the proposed building would add to those woes.

"Newcomb Street — and I've said this before to this board — is very narrow. It is flood prone. The Y is there. The high school is there," McCarthy said. "The size of this structure, in my opinion, is only going to add to the chaos that is on Newcomb Street right now."

Leo Martin, the owner of 66 Spear St., said he supported the project in a letter to the board.

"I am writing today to voice my support for the above development," he said. "The architectural design is appealing and the residual increase in property values should benefit all."

Board member Coleman

Barry said he appreciated feedback from the public but said the Planning Board lacked the ability to reject Niosi's plan outright.

"This board does not have an ability to reject this project, which under the city's zoning code is a by-right project. We can put reasonable accommodations in — that's what we want to hear from the public on," Barry said.

Rob Stevens, the city's deputy planning director, said the Planning Department recommended approval of Niosi's plan with conditions attached. Those conditions included prohibiting deliveries to the site during construction between 7 and 8 a.m. and 2 to 3 p.m. on school days.

When it came time to vote on the project, no board member made a motion to approve or deny it. Ryan instead made the motion to continue the item until Sept. 11.

"I would like to make a motion to continue it to next time and maybe the developer and the community can come together with another plan," he said.

The board has 90 days from the end of the public hearing — which was closed during the Aug. 7 meeting — to vote on the project; or else it is considered approved with no conditions attached.

Ask Barbara Graceffa: 'Secretary Of The Interior'

Decorating A Loft

I have just rented a modern loft. However, I'm stumped on how to decorate a space that is mostly extra-large windows, grey cabinetry, ductwork, and a dark stone floor. To make matters worse, I'm not allowed to hang art on the few walls that exist; help! Janine Decorating a loft can be challenging. Begin by freeing yourself of the notion that art only means adding accessories to the wall. These tips can also apply to any interior, so keep reading one and all!

Celebrate the beauty of the lines of the cabinetry and stone tiles, the textures of the stainless ductwork and bricks, and the architecture of the tall windows and vaulted ceiling that you do not find in many homes. Cantilevered wood stair treads, industrial dividing walls, or wooden columns and beams are high-style pieces of art by themselves; let them sing. Modern décor typically has less adornment so concentrate primarily on furniture, fabric, and color choices and leave lots of "breathing space" between furniture.

Shop for a few statement pieces of furniture and consider a bold solid color for your couch (or, instead, two matching arm chairs). Because the "bones" of your loft may appear cold, add warmth with dark wooden tables, bookcases, or armoires and use colors like reds, oranges, and yellows. Fabric selection can extend to a few pillows and oversized rugs to define different spaces in an open floor plan.

Oversized floor lamps, decorative pots for small trees, tall stand-alone sculptures, tablescapes, large mobiles, and framed photos or accessories perched on your window sills can also make the space your own. Traditional paintings or framed posters can sit on easels (best placed in the corners) or lean up against walls, windows, or bookcases.

August Is Tree Check Month

Imagine what the summer heat would feel like without the cooling shade of the trees in your backyard.

August is Tree Check month, according to the Massachusetts Invasive Species Council. This month, take a few minutes to check trees for invasive pests and the damage their larvae leave behind.

An invasive species is one that is non-native and likely to do harm, often displacing and destroying plants or animals. They are the largest threat to native wildlife, ecosystems and, according to George Barth, a certified arborist at Hartney Greymont, a Davey company, "a considerable threat to urban forests."

Due to the lack of natural competitors and predators, non-native species often increase in numbers and spread swiftly. Barth says the best approaches for dealing with invasive species are early detection and rapid response.

"Detecting invaders quickly, and responding rapidly to eliminate them, is essential to limiting the impact and cost when prevention fails," Barth said. "Plant diverse, native plants and remove invasive plants in your garden."

It is important to learn which invasive species are in your area, and what actions are being done to manage them. Here are some invasives to look out for in your area:

Spotted Lanternfly

The spotted lanternfly is the newest invasive on the scene. While it may not yet have been spotted in your state, this invasive plant hopper travels quickly. First discovered in 2014 in Pennsylvania, the bug has also been detected in Delaware, New York and Virginia.

Sales Down, Lending Activity Up In Norfolk County

"It is important to remember," O'Donnell noted, "that a Homestead is an important tool that provides limited protection against the forced sale of a homeowner's primary residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000."

O'Donnell concluded: "Available real estate inventory continues to be a constant source of concern in Norfolk County. It's especially been a problem for first-time homebuyers attempting to crack the market. However, there is a silver lining in the July real estate statistics and that is based on the optimistic lending numbers that we've seen.

"These figures are very encouraging and tell us reduced interest rates and a robust eastern Massachusetts economy are having a positive effect on the Norfolk County region."

On Friday, Aug. 2, at approximately 12:05 p.m., Officers Michael McNeil and Officer Christian Donovan were dispatched to 24 Chestnut St. for two males involved in a disorder over a parking space.

Upon arrival, the officers observed a Toyota stopped diagonally across the road with an older male standing next to it. When asked what the problem was, this male said that he attempted to parallel park in front of 24 Chestnut St. and as he attempted to back into the space, a male driver (suspect) in another vehicle kept beeping at him while yelling something incoherent at him.

The suspect's vehicle's front was angled into the same parking spot. He walked up to his driver side door yelling and claiming that he struck his vehicle. The suspect then opened the driver's door, grabbed the driver's left arm and pulled him from the driver's seat.

The suspect unleashed a volley of insults at very close range to the driver's face, then took the driver's sunglasses off of his face and threw them into the driver's car. The suspect then reached into the driver's vehicle and intentionally snapped the key off in the ignition. The suspect then drove off leaving the driver's car disabled in the middle of the road. The officers saw that the key was broken in half, with the teeth in the ignition and the rest on the passenger seat.

A citizen approached the officers and said that he witnessed the incident while walking down Chestnut Street. He confirmed the driver's account and the aggressiveness of the suspect. Another witness came forward and stated that the suspect was berating the driver and telling him to move his car out of the parking spot. During the interviews, officers searched the area for the suspect vehicle to no avail.

Quincy Police Communications ran the license plate of the suspect vehicle which came back to a Natick address, so the Natick Police were contacted and they provided a telephone number for the suspect. The suspect was advised to return to the scene to speak with the officers. The suspect soon after arrived on scene and was questioned about the incident.

The suspect admitted that he yelled and beeped his horn at the driver because he was getting too close to his vehicle as he was backing while trying to park. The suspect said that the driver may have tapped his bumper, so he exited his vehicle and approached the driver. He said that once the driver got out of his vehicle, he (the suspect) believed that he would try to leave the scene so he reached into the driver's vehicle and attempted to remove the keys from the ignition. He added that he accidentally broke the ignition key.

The suspect said that he looked around for a police officer to report the accident so he removed the keys. This didn't make sense because the driver was outside of his vehicle by all accounts so he was not trying to drive away. The suspect did not call the police - he only looked around for one!

The suspect, a 53-year-old Natick resident, was placed under arrest for assault and battery on a victim of 60 years old and defacing property. The suspect was asked if he had any firearms on his person (Quincy Police Communications had informed the officers that he had an active license to carry).

The suspect said he was on his way to go hunting with his father and had an air rifle in his back seat and a small 22 caliber handgun with 1 loaded magazine. Officer Donovan took control of these weapons for safekeeping, secured

Ayers said he and his friend worked together on the legislation.

"What this bill would do is remove the age provision of 60 years old so that people who suffer from early Alzheimer's would be able to qualify for that necessary funding," he stated.

"It was a really sad story. Just the costs associated with everything that was medically needed and the treatment and services she needed — he couldn't afford it and ended up retiring; they sold their house. It was really devastating for the family. We worked together on this bill."

Ayers noted the bill has been co-sponsored by a majority of members in both the House and the Senate. Ayers said he and his colleagues understand how devastating Alzheimer's can be.

"I think everyone knows somebody affected by Alzheimer's, whether it is a family member or friend," Ayers said.

"My mom had it...My brother, Chuck, and I took care of her. We were lucky we were able to keep her in her own home and take care of her. We used to sleep over every other night and we had help during the day, but it's just tough.

"For someone who suffers from early dementia, it's just tragic. It's a tough disease. This makes it easier."

Cruising With Motown 4 NF To Benefit Neurofibromatosis

The second annual Cruising with Motown 4 NF presented by Eastern Bank will take place on Saturday, Aug. 17 from 4 to 7 p.m. on the "Boston Belle."

The cruise will depart from Squantum Point Park, Miwra Haul Road in Quincy. Join Catherine Doherty and Loretta DeGrazia and cruise towards a cure in honor of their son, Miguel who has neurofibromatosis type 1. The event will feature tunes of the Motown era, food, costumes, music, and more.

"Miguel has never let NF define him; sometimes his inner strength amazes me with his not so fiery flame that everyone can see," Loretta DeGrazia said. "It's his soft demeanor and his tiny little spark that says, 'I got this Mom,' and I immediately think, wow let's just keep pushing forward."

Proceeds from Cruising with Motown 4 NF will support the programs of Burlington, MA based non-profit Neurofibromatosis Northeast.

'Campaign Reception' For Peg O'Connor Aug. 16

The Committee to Elect Peg O'Connor Mayor of Houghs Neck will host a "Campaign Reception" in her honor on Friday, Aug. 16th at 7 p.m. at Quincy Yacht Club, 1310 Sea St.

Donations will be collected at the door with proceeds to benefit the Houghs Neck Community Council.

The evening will include live music and raffles.

Those unable to attend but would like to contribute are asked to make out checks payable to the Houghs Neck Community Council and mailed to Margaret Laforest, 236 Rock Island Rd., Quincy, MA 02169. Laforest nominated Peg for the honorary title of mayor of Houghs Neck because she epitomizes what the Neck is all about; good people who are committed to family and community.

"Peg is a HN Good Neighbor recipient, has been active with many organizations including the HN Community Council, Manet Community Health; Most Blessed Sacrament Church, and her passion the South Shore Center for the Blind. She recently received the Francis X. McCauley Community Service Award from the Quincy Lions Club," Laforest said.

"Peg loves to get together with her friends on Friday nights, so we ask you to join us in showing your appreciation for this HN matriarch and come to QYC. The HNCC created the mayor of Houghs Neck contest as a fun way to recognize those who make our neighborhood so great.

"The title is awarded at the HN Chowdifest in September to the person who raises the most money. The funds are used to provide free programming at neighborhood events like 3rd of July, Easter Bunny Fun Day and Harvest Fest," Laforest added.

If you would like to contribute a raffle item or have any questions, contact Margaret at 617-224-2974 or ml@margaretlaforest.com.

EQUIFAX SETTLEMENT SCAM: The Equifax data breach is real and a settlement has been offered to those directly involved. Those affected have been offered a choice between free credit monitoring or a $125 payment. There are many articles about the difficulty of actually getting the money settlement — namely that there are so many steps to fulfill to get the money. According to the Federal Trade Commission, the credit monitoring is actually worth much more than the $125 payment!

The scam is that criminals are now targeting potential Equifax victims with phishing attacks and are spoofing the Equifax settlement page. The scammer is attempting to gather your personal information such as date of birth, social security number, mother's maiden name etc. for identity fraud purposes. This may lead to a wide range of issues for you, such as credit issues and criminal charges. (Someone posing as you committing crimes).

The safest way to file a claim is to go to the FTC website (<https://www.ftc.gov/enforcement/cases-proceedings/refunds/equifax-data-breach-settlement>) and click on the blue, "File a Claim" button. The website will check your eligibility for that claim since not everyone's information was compromised.

CRIME WATCH BULLETIN! Recently, there has been an uptick in complaints of questionable businesses roaming about Quincy, offering services such as paving, masonry and landscaping. These companies may or may not have logos on their vehicles but this does not make them legitimate.

Concerns have been made by family members of seniors who have been approached by these companies, who come to their door with offers to fix up their properties. There have been isolated complaints of high pressure tactics as well as intimidation. The representative has the resident sign an often lengthy and confusing contract with an elevated price estimate.

The key word is "estimate" since once the work is done, the representative can pressure the homeowner to pay additional costs. One of the problems that arises is when one neighbor hires a company to do some work (without knowing anything about them) and then other neighbors believe that the company must be credible so they too hire the company. Until someone questions the company's work reliability and pricing, many people can become victims of scams. These companies are hard to track down (done intentionally) which makes it difficult to recover any losses.

These unethical and often shady "fly by night" companies exist because there are plenty of potential victims out there. They tend to prey on senior citizens. As family members, neighbors and concerned citizens, it is important to remind anyone vulnerable to these scams that they should contact a trusted person before signing any contract.

There are numerous well-respected companies in the Quincy area that provide services you may need and they come with verifiable references, Better Business Bureau ratings and recommendations within the community.

As always, if you feel that you are a victim of a shady business offer, contact the Quincy Police Department at 617-479-1212. For additional information, contact me, Lt. Dan Minton at 617-745-5719.

August Is Tree Check Month

Early detection is vital for the protection of several agricultural industries and your trees. Ongoing infestations will need the right management strategies in order to keep populations to a minimum.

Emerald Ash Borer

By now, you've probably heard of the emerald ash borer, often called EAB. It's an incredibly destructive invasive insect that was first detected in Michigan in 2002. EAB has been detected in 35 states, many of which are part of a national quarantine zone, limiting the movement of all hardwood, firewood, and green wood products, nursery stock, and any plant materials from any ash species in an effort to stop the spread of this beetle.

Gypsy Moths

The gypsy moth is an invasive forest pest from Europe that is one of the most damaging tree defoliators currently in the U.S. They were first introduced in the 1860s by an amateur entomologist in Medford, Massachusetts and are now well established throughout the United States. They hatch from late April to early May, and the young caterpillars begin feeding on new tree leaves at the same time.

Many cities have implemented control measures to help combat many invasive infestations. As a homeowner, however, you are responsible for protecting your own trees from any invasive species.

5 Things to Know About Invasives

1. They threaten native wildlife and ecosystems by destroying or replacing native food sources.
2. They push many native plants and animals to the brink of extinction.

3. Invasives put 70 million acres of public and private lands at serious risk from 26 different insects and diseases, most of which are non-native invasives — according to the U.S. Forest Service.

4. Cause ecological havoc: Some invasives are capable of changing ecosystems, such as changing soil chemistry or intensifying wildfires.

5. They cost the U.S. billions of dollars in the effort to control or eradicate these invaders and restore habitats such as inedible lands, clogged waterways, and decimated commercial fisheries. Estimates are that the United States spends $138 billion per year in damage and associated control costs in the fight against invasives — according to the U.S. Forest Service.

Unfortunately, Barth says that invasives are here to stay. "Our challenge is to recognize which invasives need to be managed and how to effectively manage them."

DA Morrissey Hosts Basketball Camp For City Kids

The lessons imparted at Norfolk District Attorney Michael W. Morrissey's summer basketball camp apply equally to basketball and to life.

"Respect those around you. Remember who is on your team, and whom you can trust. We get further with teamwork than going it alone. If someone gets knocked down, help them up," District Attorney Michael W. Morrissey said after the three-day camp concluded last week. "This is a basketball camp first, but it is also a way to reinforce the messages that kids are getting at home and in school — and how it applies in the world."

This is Morrissey's ninth year as Norfolk district attorney after representing Quincy in the state senate. He is also a former state representative. Morrissey has sponsored basketball camps in Quincy every summer, funded from money that judges have ordered forfeited following criminal prosecutions. The campers are in grades 3 through 8.

"I grew up in the City of Quincy, and summer break could seem long unless you had something good to look forward to. This camp allows us to provide a positive experience for a few dozen kids who can use it," Morrissey said.

The camp was held in the gym at the Snug Harbor Community School this year. This summer's coaching team was Jenna Clark, who plays Division 1 college ball at Fairleigh-Dickenson College and Joe Bunce-Grenon, a past Harlem Wizards player recently featured on the TNT Network's show "The Dunk King."

Morrissey said the camp was made better by the contributions of several partner agencies, including the Quincy YMCA, the Quincy Police Department, who sent K-9 Officer Kent Yee to the camp with some canine partners, and Norfolk County Sheriff Jerome McDermott, who sent Deputy Sheriff James Ross and the department's "Smoke Van" home fire safety simulator for a demonstration.

Weymouth Fire Deputy Chief Justin Myers also made a presentation to the group about fire safety protocols, smoke detectors and the work of a firefighter.

Dependable Used Cars, Intermittent Ignition, Storing Hybrid

Ask John Paul: AAA New England's Car Doctor

I'm looking for a dependable used car for a reasonable price. The car I'm looking at is the Pontiac Vibe. I like the idea of this little wagon and since it is powered by a Toyota engine it should last a long time. Do you have any advice of particular years I should look at?

Here in the Northeast it always makes some sense to look at the latest model year you can find to avoid rust. Some people consider the 2010/2011 Vibe a possible collector's car because it may have been the last Pontiac manufactured (some say the Pontiac G6). I don't think the Vibe will ever be a collector car, at least in my lifetime. The Vibe offers a comfortable ride, nice use of interior space and decent handling. Unless you need all-wheel-drive, I would look for a second-generation Vibe, the 2009-2010 model with the larger 2.4-liter engine. The 1.8-liter engine is fine but the added 26 additional horsepower just makes the Vibe more enjoyable to drive.

I need some advice regarding my granddaughter's 2005 Saab 92x with the 2.5L (Subaru) engine. It all of a sudden started running very rough, kind of sputtering. I've replaced the spark plugs and checked for spark by unplugging the spark plugs and it appeared that cylinder number three wasn't working as much. I then did a compression test and cylinder number three had about 50 PSI compression less than the other three cylinders. I then ran the car and used a code reader which displayed a misfire on cylinder number three. I'm wondering what besides the plug not firing might cause the code reader to indicate a misfire on cylinder number three.

A misfire code can be caused by fuel, electrical or mechanical problems. In this case it seems as if the code reader confirmed the results of the compression test. At this point you could perform a wet/dry compression test or a cylinder leak-down test to determine if this is a valve or piston ring issue. It is certainly possible that there is a worn intake or exhaust valve cause the misfire code and poor engine performance.

I hope you can shed some light on an issue I am having with my 2010 Ford Escape (120,000). For the past year or so I have been having trouble with the ignition—intermittent at first, it has been steadily getting worse. When I turn the key the vehicle does nothing, it does not start the car, it makes no noise. Sometimes I have to do it 10 times or more to get it to start, always thinking this is the time it will not start, and I will be stranded. I am told it is not the transmission (and moving the gear shift into N and back into P does not make any difference). I recently brought it to a local mechanic's shop, and they looked at it and couldn't fix it, so they called the Ford dealer and—bottom line—there seems to be no fix for this. My repair guy has told me to pick up the car and keep turning the key repeatedly and hope it starts and to bring it back to him some day when they have more time and they will try to figure out something to do. A quick online search shows me that our Escape is not the only one with this problem but apparently there is no recall addressing this issue. Have you seen or heard of this before? Any words of wisdom?

Ford did issue a technical service bulletin that describes this condition which can affect 2010-2012 Ford Escape vehicles. The issue appears to have to do with the starter mounting. The repair involves removing the starter and rethreading the starter mounting holes. This condition will not set a trouble code or a code for the anti-theft system. I have to admit it seemed a bit odd, but certainly worth a try.

I am a happy new owner of a 2019 Toyota RAV4 Hybrid. This is our first hybrid car. As "snowbirds," my husband and I head to warmer weather over the winter for about four months. With our prior cars that remained in our garage here, we usually filled the gas tanks and either removed the battery or used a trickle charger. We're a bit stumped as to how best take care of a hybrid. Our servicing dealer said it would be fine and no extra care is needed for the battery. He said to simply park it in the garage and leave it. What do you think?

JOHN PAUL

In addition to your typical winter preparation, drive your Toyota in a way to try to get the traction battery as fully charged as possible. There will be some normal parasitic drain on the hybrid battery, but having it fully charged before storage will help avert any problems. I would use a "float" style battery charger for the 12-volt battery to keep that battery fully charged. When you return after winter, the car should be fine.

I have a 2018 Touring edition Honda CR-V. The vehicle has a battery issue. I have had to have my car jumped started numerous times since getting the car in February of 2018. This includes even after the battery was replaced by Honda. I make sure that everything that can

Merrymount Team Wins Neighborhood Cornhole Tournament

The Wollaston Hill Neighborhood Association (WHNA) recently hosted its sixth and final week of Saturdays in the Park, a summer series featuring a craft beer garden, food, live music, family fun, and wellness.

"I had such a great time at Saturday's in the Park this summer," said WHNA Vice President Kathy Hubley, one of the event organizers. "So wonderful seeing so many neighbors out with their families enjoying the park. We can't wait to start planning for next year."

The final event Aug. 3rd kicked off with a Pound and Bardio class demonstration by Katie Asack (AKA Katie Kickbutt), owner and fitness expert from Commit 2B Fit Studio. The Tapped Beer Truck poured local beer all afternoon, while The Quincy BBQ Guys served BBQ favorites and Ellie's Treats served ice cream. The afternoon was filled with live music from local classic rock band "The Fall."

event series concluded with a Quincy All-Neighborhood Cornhole tournament. Teams from neighborhoods across Quincy competed, with the team from Merrymount walking away with the top honors.

"We enjoyed the competition and look forward to competing again next year. It was a great event," said David Hyman from the winning Merrymount team.

be turned off is when I turn off the car. It has been suggested by the dealer that I drive on the highway, at least once a week. I do that. It's a dilemma because it recently sat for a week while I was on vacation and started right up upon my return. Now two plus weeks past that after driving it several times it once again would not start. The battery was again dead and required a jump start from AAA. The driver said the meter he put on the battery said the battery was no good. He suggested getting to the dealership for a new battery since it is still under warranty. He warned me the battery would probably be dead again by the next day. It has been a few days since the jump. I have not yet taken it to the dealership. Primarily because they always seem to give me a hard time over it and will not own up to the fact that there may be a problem with the car or batteries. They just sort of blow it off even though the car is still under warranty. I have made a point to drive it daily even if only for a short ride. Any ideas or suggestions?

Two things: the dealer needs to do a parasitic-draw battery test to see if there is some system staying on draining the battery. To some extent the dealer may be correct about driving the car. Years back we would always say it takes about seven miles of driving to recharge the battery each time you start the car. In my opinion I think that still holds true. Very short trips over time will lead to the battery dying. Also just jump starting the car doesn't recharge the battery, it just gets the engine going. It is always best to charge a discharged battery with a battery charger. As good as batteries are today once they are completely discharged a few times they never recover fully. In 2017 Honda did issue a software update to correct a similar issue. On some vehicles the vehicle stability assist (VSA) module would not shut down and cause the battery to become discharged. One final thought if the dealer can't come up with a good answer ask them to have a Honda field engineer come out and evaluate the car.

I have been regularly taking my 2013 Toyota Tacoma since new back to the dealer for scheduled maintenance. In checking my owner's manual Toyota recommends 5W-30 oil for my vehicle's V6 engine. After checking my service records, the dealer has been putting in 5W-20 oil from the beginning of service. I contacted "Ask Toyota" for the impact of the wrong oil may have but all I get is the run-around with non-committal e-mails. Still waiting for a call back from the dealer. I have a little over 38,000 miles on the truck. Is this a problem?

Both oils will work well in cold temperatures, but the 5W/30 oil protects better in very hot temperatures. The thinner oil also could provide slightly better fuel economy. Interestingly in new Toyota V-6 engines the recommended oil is 0W/20 or 5W/20 oil. If you lived in central Florida or Arizona where the temperatures are routinely above 90 degrees, then I would have more of a concern. That being said the dealer used the wrong oil and I think a reasonable answer is that Toyota or the dealer adds an extended warranty to the engine to cover any possible issues.

Avalon Beach Tour Aug. 24

The Quincy Park Department is offering a free tour Saturday, Aug. 24 around the Avalon Beach area, part of the first federal public housing built in 1918-1919 to house workers employed by the Fore River Shipyard as part of the war effort.

Participants will view the amazing versatility of architect James McLaughlin (he designed Fenway Park) who used several basic floor plans to create a variety of interesting homes that were so well built and charming that many exist substantially unchanged today.

The tour will also feature the work of landscape architect Herbert Kellaway who worked with Frederick Law Olmsted.

South Shore Children's Chorus Announces Registration For Fall Programs

South Shore Children's Chorus (SSCC) announces open registration for its fall programs at Quincy Point Congregational Church, 444 Washington St., Quincy, and at Sharon Community Center, 219 Massapoag Ave., Sharon.

Three non-auditioned choirs welcome new singers beginning in September, under the direction of founding Artistic Director Kirsten Oberoi. Through positive encouragement and an uplifting environment, chorists learn to be confident and enjoy using their voices.

SSCC's Training Choir engages students in grades K through 3 by developing their musicality and voices through songs, movement and listening. Choristers graduate from the Training Choir understanding appropriate behavior in a choral rehearsal, pitch-matching skills, basic vocal technique, beginning ear training and solfège and basic music notation reading skills.

The ensemble performs at annual SSCC performances and occasionally in the community. Training Choir meets weekly on Tuesdays in Sharon, or on Wednesdays in Quincy. Singers are required to attend weekly rehearsals, as well as one All-Together rehearsal per month on Sunday afternoons, combining both Training Choir branches.

SSCC's Intermediate Choir trains students in grades 4 through 7 to develop sight-singing skills, begin singing in two or three parts and develop more advanced vocal technique. Choristers graduate from the Intermediate Choir as independent choral singers who understand professional behavior in a choral rehearsal, vocal technique, and management and the ability to read music well. The ensemble performs at annual SSCC performances, as well as community performances throughout the season. Intermediate Choir meets weekly on Tuesdays in Sharon, or on Wednesdays in Quincy. Singers are required to attend weekly rehearsals, as well as one All-Together rehearsal per month on Sunday afternoons, combining both Intermediate Choir branches.

SSCC's Advanced Choir instructs students in grades 8 through 12 to develop advanced sight-singing skills, sing challenging collegiate-level repertoire and develop advanced vocal technique through performance and rehearsal of a variety of musical genres. Choristers graduate from the Advanced Choir as choral leaders ready to participate in choirs at the professional or college level, who exemplify respectful behavior in a choral rehearsal, model advanced vocal technique and management and demonstrate impressive sight-singing and music theory skills. As a premiere SSCC ensemble, the Advanced Choir performs at annual SSCC performances, as well as community performances throughout the season.

For tuition and schedule details, to register, or for more information, visit southshorechildrenschorus.org, or email Artistic Director Kirsten Oberoi at oberoi@ssccchorus.org, or Program Manager Jeff Popadic at popadic@ssccchorus.org.

Annual Squantum Road Race Supports July 4th Parade

Approximately 70 runners between the ages of 5 and 60 participated in this year's annual Squantum Road Race on Saturday June 29th.

The race, held in memory of longtime Squantum resident Frank Buckley, is a part of Squantum's 4th of July tradition and celebration. It is sponsored each year by state Rep. Bruce Ayers.

Participants who ran the 2.5-mile route around Squantum received a commemorative t-shirt. Younger participants also received medals, while the winners of their age categories were presented with trophies.

"It's a great way to engage the community and raise funds for the Squantum 4th of July Parade," Ayers said. "So many families come and participate every year and have made it part of their tradition. It's nice to see how excited the kids get."

First and second place winners were named for each age group. The 1st Place Overall male runner was Liam Faherty, and the 1st Place Overall female runner was Josie Oberton. Both are under the age of 15 – the youngest overall winners in recent memory.

Others receiving trophies include: Oisín Faherty and Jacqueline Manning, Ages 10 & Under; Aidan Manning & Mary McNally, Ages 11-15; Chris Cataldo, Ages 21-30; Joe Baragwanath and Racquel Mailloux-Martin, Ages 31-40; Brian Kerins and Jason Oberton, Ages 41-50; and Terry Buchmiller and Dawn Kulig, Ages 51-60.

The race raised over $600 for the Squantum 4th of July Parade.

Ayers thanked the Quincy Police Department for providing a motorcycle detail, and also thanked the Quincy Fire Department for allowing the use of the Squantum Fire Station facilities. He also thanked Ward 6 City Councillor Bill Harris for printing the t-shirts. "It just goes to show that the whole community has a hand in making this event happen," he said.

Ayers also said that the race wouldn't be possible without the help of volunteers, specifically the Buckley family. "Every year Frank Buckley's kids work hard to make sure their dad's legacy lives on," Ayers said. "Kim helps to or-

Most of all, Ayers thanked the runners and the spectators. "Despite some thunderstorms earlier in the morning, we still had a great crowd of runners and neighbors who came out to watch and support the event," he noted. "Squantum is a special place, and the road race proves that every year. It's a great community to be a part of."

by Tony Rizzo

HOLLYWOOD -- Disney was determined that "Avengers: Endgame" pass No. 2 "Titanic" ($2.18 billion) and No. 1 "Avatar" ($2.78 billion) to become the top-grossing film of all time. Disney rereleased "Endgame" over the Fourth of July weekend and kept it in theaters until it got what it wanted, a total gross of $2.79 billion. Ironically, Disney has a stake in all three films. It produced and released "Endgame," acquired rights to "Avatar" when it bought 20th-Century Fox, and gained the international rights to "Titanic" in the Fox buy. Disney also now owns the "Avatar" sequels 2-4, with "Avatar 2" due in December 2021.

Disney is taking the Marvel Universe in new directions. The success of "Captain Marvel," with "Room" Oscar-winner Brie Larson, who rode the title character (the first time a woman) to a $1.1 billion gross, has now led to another Oscar-winning actress, Natalie Portman ("Black Swan"), becoming the first female "Thor" in "Thor 4: Love and Thunder." Where this leaves Chris Hemsworth is anyone's guess. But fear not, Benedict Cumberbatch will be back as "Doctor Strange" in "Multiverse of Madness." Brie Larson will undoubtedly be back as "Captain Marvel," but first she stars in "Just Mercy," with Michael B. Jordan and Jamie Foxx, for a Christmas Day release.

Tom Cruise will release "Mission Impossible VII" in 2021 (when he's 59) and "Mission Impossible VIII" in 2022 (when he's 60). He was injured doing his own stunts in the last "Mission Impossible." Cruise may be trying to prove he's still got what it takes to be an action star, but some of us remember his Oscar-nominated acting in "Jerry Maguire" (1996), the kind of action he should now be pursuing.

What does NBC/Universal suddenly have against Steve Harvey? First it brushed aside his hit daytime show "Steve" in favor of a new talk show with Kelly Clarkson. Then a day later we learned it again brushed him aside from "Little Big Shots," the show he and Ellen DeGeneres created, in favor of Melissa McCarthy. Steve's response? "My show is the only show in the last seven years in syndication that has stuck." He still has "Celebrity Family Feud" on ABC, "Family Feud" in syndication, "The Steve Harvey Radio Show" and the return of "Showtime at the Apollo." NBC/Universal may find a itself in trouble when execs try to renegotiate with his "Little Big Shots" co-creator Ellen DeGeneres, whose show is up in mid-2020. As a writer, his use of double negatives made me cringe, but his wisdom and humor is so deep, one wonders if Kelly Clarkson can ever make us laugh as he does.

KOVELS Antiques & Collecting

By Terry and Kim Kovel

Folding Fan -- A quick look online for a collectible old fan will show electric fans made since the late 1800s. But some collectors want even older fans, the handheld folding fans that were being made by the 1700s. These fans were more than a fashion accessory -- they were important indicators of the user's status and good taste. There was even a "language of love" using the fan that let a lady flirt, ask men to come by to chat, or even hit an irritating person.

Folding fans were made with sticks of bone, ivory, bamboo, wood, tortoiseshell, mother-of-pearl, lacquer, metal or more recently, plastic. They held a decorated cover of silk, paper, leather or canvas. Some had added jewels and artist-drawn oil or watercolor paintings. A talented fan painter was as important as an artist who created portraits or landscapes.

Collectors in the 1950s searched for period fans and often mounted them in half-circle frames. Expensive fans of the past are hard to find in good condition. This painted paper fan with carved gilt sticks decorated with mother-of-pearl was offered for sale at a Neal auction.

Q: My mother has my grandparents' desk. It is kneehole style, with a curvy front, two drawers on each side and a drawer in the middle. The label on the back reads "Cherry and Maple/Atlas Furniture Co., Jamestown, New York." What is it worth?

A: Atlas Furniture Co. was formed in 1883 as the Swedish Furniture Co. by Swedish immigrants Lawrence Erickson and Gustave Holmberg in Jamestown. The name was changed to Atlas in 1871. Atlas advertised as "Manufacturers of Bedroom Furniture," making "better" grades of bedroom furniture, including dressers, chiffoniers and toilet tables from walnut, mahogany and other woods. Atlas closed in 1941. Your desk would sell for $50 to $100.

Q: I found 10 unused World War I postcards. The title of one of the postcards is "Les Americains au Camp d'Auvours." I've spent hours online and can't find anything similar. Are they worth anything?

A: A military camp has been located at Champagne, France, since the 1870s. Allied troops used the camp as a rear base during World War I. A series of postcards was made picturing American troops at the camp and most sell online for under $5. To find out more, go to a postcard show or antiques show and talk to a postcard dealer.

Strange BUT TRUE

* It was English novelist and essayist Virginia Woolf, one of the foremost modernist literary figures of the 20th century, who made the following sage observation: "For most of history, Anonymous was a woman."

* Would you rather give up TV or your phone? In a Pew Research poll conducted last year in the United States, only 31 percent of those surveyed said it would be "very hard" to give up TV, while 52 percent said the same thing about their cellphone.

* In the language known as Ewe, spoken by some natives of West Africa, the concepts of "yesterday" and "tomorrow" are expressed by the same word. If you were to translate that word literally into English, you'd come up with "not now."

* Most people are aware of the fact that scorpions have eight legs -- they are, after all, arachnids -- but you probably didn't realize that they also have eight eyes. * According to the Crayola Company, you can eat 3,500 of their crayons a day and still not reach the level of toxicity found in an ordinary glass of drinking water. They don't mention how -- or why -- anyone would consume that many crayons in a lifetime, let alone a single day.

* Those who study such things say that Niagara Falls will only last another 2,400 years.

* Historians say that Mary, Queen of Scots was informed of the murder of her husband, Lord Darnley, in 1567 while she was playing golf. She must have been quite a dedicated sportswoman (or an indifferent wife) because they also say that she completed the round.

Now here's a tip!

by Jo Ann Derson

* "I found some really cool curtain tie-backs on a clearance rack. I bought several and mounted them as hooks (I used an extra anchor), and they work perfectly." -- S.L. in Ohio

* Mount a tension bar high up in your closet, and you can use shower hooks to hang pocketbooks and small bags, utilizing the dead space and keeping your bags from getting crushed.

* "Quick outdoor upgrade: Power wash a wood fence or your driveway before summer is over. As the weather cools down, I know I'm spending more time outside. With a pressure wash, your fence will look nice and clean." -- JoAnn

* "Use the clips on a pants hanger to keep curtains closed in a hotel room. This has saved me from getting woken up too early because my room is facing the morning sun." -- Y.L. in New Mexico

* Be sure to clean earbuds and phone/table touchscreens regularly -- especially as kids go back to school and face a new group of germs they might not have been exposed to over the summer break.

* Use a Tic-Tac container to store bobby pins or toothpicks for traveling. An Altoids tin makes a good holder for flossers.

RACE TEAM - Skipper Jack Leuchte, left, age 10, of Quincy, uses the tiller to guide his boat to the finish as his cousin, Sean Leuchte, age 9, of Scituate, keeps a lookout during the recent Quincy Bay Race Week competition. Both boys sail out of Town River Yacht Club. The boys were incorrectly listed as brothers in a photo caption in the Aug. 8th issue of The Quincy Sun. The Sun regrets the error.
